Mrs. J. P. Bell, Ossaatomie, Kan.

wife of the editor of The Graphic, the leading local paper of Miami county, writes

"I was troubled with heart disease for six years, severe palpitations, shortness of breath, together with such extreme nervousness, that at times I would walk the floor nearly all night. We consulted the best medical talent.

They said there was no help for me, that I had organic disease of the heart for which there was no remedy. I had read your advertisement in The Graphic and a year ago, as a last resort, tried one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart, which convinced me that there was true merit in it. I took three bottles each of the Heart Cure and Restorative Nervine and it completely cured me. I sleep well at night, my heart beats regularly and I have no more smothering spells. I wish to say to all who are suffering as I did: there's relief untold for them if they will only give your remedies just one trial."

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1.00 per bottle, or it will be sent prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

How to Work a Balky Horse

The subject matter under discussion was balky horses. John Miller, cashier of the Citizens' National bank of Big Rum, had the floor. He said: "When I was a chunk of a boy my father had a balky horse which it occasionally fell to my lot to drive. It was a heart-rending experience and often exhausted my patience and ingenuity in attempts to make him go. He would jog along all right on the level or down hill, but he would not go up hill. He would just stand. If you would lick him he would proceed to back. Finally I hit on a scheme. When I came to a hill I'd just turn the brute around and whip him and he would back up the hill. When he reached the top I just turned him around and he would go down all right."

NEWSPAPER DEFINITIONS

The "Editorial Column" spoken of in a newspaper is a certain portion set apart for a man who is called the editor. It is supposed to be devoted to his use, and for him to air his opinions and say unpleasant things about his newspaper opponents.

The "Local Column" is a column which has for its special mission the downfall of the reporter. It is the column in which John Smith should have been mentioned, and for the reason he wasn't you don't get invited to Smith's party, and they speak of you as a "stuck up old thing," and are glad their name wasn't put in your "old paper."

"General News Column" contains a lot of premeditated lies and truths, all supposed to be truths.

The "Woman's Corner" is a space used by some school girl who wouldn't know a kitchen from a wood shed, to tell others how to cook, or an editor's wife who has but one dress, tells how others should be dressed.

The "Religious Column" is a small space wherein the editor reconciles his wife and his conscience after having cussed out the town.

"Obituary Notices" are little lies that we poor editors have to tell about how good some cuss was who died owing us three years' subscription or who didn't take the paper at all in his life time.

"Ads." are instruments used in hoisting business men who take advantage of them, from the depth of poverty to wealth and prosperity.—Rural Retreat Times.

It Soaks Into the Flesh

right down through the fevered parts to where the inflammation is rooted. That is why Mustang Liniment "cures all aches and pains of man or beast." If it evaporated or remained on the skin it could not cure. That is why volatile extracts fail. They can't go down through the inflamed parts.

Mustang Liniment

owes its success to its power of penetration. There is nothing marvelous about its curative powers. It is simply a few common sense ingredients combined in a way to make penetration possible and insure a cure.

HATRED FOR SILVER.

Hon. George Q. Cannon, the well-known Mormon leader of Utah, was in St. Louis last week en route to Salt Lake City from an extended tour of the East.

"One thing that impressed me above another in the East," remarked Mr. Cannon to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "is the implacable hatred of the Eastern people, irrespective of political affiliations, for silver. Why, this hatred is so pronounced at Boston that I found it almost impossible there to get a paper bill changed into silver. The wildest and most unreasonable cranks I ever saw are the gold-bugs of New England. But they are sure to be brought up with a short turn in the next national election, and then their senses will return. Neither of the two great parties dare refuse the freest and fullest recognition of silver in their platforms in 1896, and neither will have the hardihood to nominate a gold-bug on any sort of a platform. The whole West is too intensely in earnest on this momentous question to longer be trifled with."

Elias Howe almost beggared himself before he discovered where the eye of the needle of a sewing machine should be located, says the Philadelphia Times. His original idea was to follow the model of the eye at the heel. It never occurred to him that it should be placed near the point, and he might have failed altogether if he had not dreamed he was building a sewing machine for a savage king in a strange country. Just as in his actual waking experience, he was rather perplexed about the needle's eye. He thought the king gave him twenty-four hours to complete a machine and make it sew. If not finished in that time death was to be his punishment. Howe worked and worked and puzzled and finally gave it up. Then he thought he was taken out to be executed. He noticed that the warriors carried spears that were pierced near the head. Instantly came the solution of the difficulty, and while the inventor was begging for time he awoke. He jumped out of bed, ran to his workshop and by 9 o'clock a needle with an eye at the point had been rudely modeled. After that it was easy. This is a true story of an important incident in the invention of the sewing machine.

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

The governors of Texas and Arkansas have been wrestling for some time against the occurrence of pugilistic encounters in those states with a good degree of success. Late papers announce that the fight has been declared off between Corbett and Fitzsimmons because arrest and imprisonment stared the participants in the face, provided they insisted on having the fight either on Texas or Arkansas soil.

The objection to pugilistic encounters is that they are brutal, and do not belong to this civilized day and age of the world. That they cause to assemble in great numbers a rough element of society, thieves, thugs and gamblers of a low order whose meeting together is not best for any community.

We, however, have heard of no especial objection being made to a contest at football, in any community, notwithstanding the results of these contests, many times, show them to be about as brutal as pugilistic encounters.

Our own state university has among its students an organized craze of this character, sanctioned by its faculty and curators.

Its members go to other states when challenged and contend with other organizations for the mastery, and their success is hailed with a flourish of trumpets equal in volubility to that attendant upon the success of the interstate contest in oratory, or of the winning of some wonderful literary prize.

Not long since the football team of the Vanderbilt university, from Nashville, Tennessee, and the Missouri university team had a spirited contest at Columbia, which resulted disastrously to the Tennesseans, as the score was 16 to 0 against them.

But that was not all the misfortunes that attended the visitors. Three of their number went away with broken arms, besides others, who had numerous bruises, etc. We know of no prize-fight that resulted more disastrously to the participants than did this game at football result to the Vanderbilt team.

If educators in our schools, religious and secular, persist in encouraging and permitting these brutal contests at football, which must of necessity create more or less demoralization in the schools, over which they preside, we think it would not be amiss to have them forbidden by statutory enactment.

Timely Sheep Notes.

The English market does not want old sheep.

FLOCKS are often injured in winter by lack of exercise.

A FAIR quantity of grass, neither too long or too short, should be maintained in the sheep pasture.

DRY feeding when the flock is turned upon the pasture in the spring and also in the fall, should be maintained.

THE advice never to change suddenly from dry to green feeding, or from green to dry, is often given, but it will bear repeating.

TRY changing the flock from one pasture to another every week or ten days and see if it is not better for the sheep and better for the pasture.—Farmer's Voice.

HOW BLAINE AND CONKLING BECAME ENEMIES

The following, taken from the biography of James G. Blaine by Gail Hamilton, explains the controversy which occasioned the bitter enmity between Mr. Blaine and Roscoe Conkling, which lasted while they lived. She says:

"The House of Representatives on April 24, 1866, resumed the consideration of the bill entitled 'An act to reorganize and establish the army of the United States.' Mr. Conkling objected to the twentieth section, which provided for the creation of a provost marshal-general, on the ground that it created an unnecessary office for an undeserving public servant.

"It may be mentioned," says the biographer, "that the officer who was so obnoxious to Mr. Conkling had been assigned to Western New York by General James P. Fry, at the request of Secretary of State William H. Seward.

"Mr. Blaine replied to Mr. Conkling plainly and dispassionately, defending General Fry. In the debate which followed Mr. Conkling lost his patience to the point of direct and simple ire. He said, among other things: 'I do not wish to have anything to do with the member from Maine. Dr. Speaker, if he had the least idea of how profoundly indifferent I am to his opinion upon the subject which he has been discussing, or upon any other subject personal to me, I think he would hardly take the trouble to arise here and express his opinion. I submit the whole matter to the members of the house, making, as I do, an apology for the length of time which I have occupied in consequence of going into explanations by an interruption which I pronounced the other day as ungentlemanly and unparliamentary, and which had nothing whatever to do with the question.'"

"Mr. Conkling was alluding to an interruption made by Mr. Blaine to some of his (Conkling's) statements. Mr. Blaine then rose, and turning directly to Mr. Conkling there came out a swift downpour of scorn for scorn.

"As to the gentleman's sarcasm, I hope he will not be too severe. The contempt of that large-minded gentleman is willing, his haughty disdain, his grandiloquent swell, majestic superciliousness, overpowering turkey-gobbler strut has been so crushing to myself, and to all the members of the house, that I know it was an act of the greatest temerity for me to venture upon a controversy with him."

"Referring then to a chance newspaper comparison of Mr. Conkling to Henry Winter Davis, he continued: 'The gentleman took it seriously, and it has given his strut additional pomposity. The resemblance is great; it is striking—Hyperion to a satyr, Thersites to Hercules, mud to marble, dunghill to diamond, a singed cat to a Bengal tiger, a whining puppy to a roaring lion! Shade of the mighty Davis, forgive the almost profanity of that jocose satire!'

"The House of Representatives proved to be children of large growth. It listened to every word and shouted its indistinguishable laughter."

FINAL SETTLEMENT NOTICE.

Creditors and all others interested in the estate of John Kohne, deceased, are hereby notified that at the next regular term of the Chariton county probate court, to be begun and held on the second Monday in November, 1895, at the court-house, in Keytesville, in said county, I shall make final settlement of said estate.

Henry Bange, Administrator.
